The BMJ Group is a private limited company incorporated in England and Wales with company registration number 3102371. Our registered offices are situated at BMA House, Tavistock Square, London, WC1H 9JR, UK. Our VAT number is GB674738491.

Use of this website

Please read the following User Terms and Conditions, which include the rules that govern your use of the Website including without limitation all information content within including text images made available by you, you and third parties. By using the Website, you are agreeing to these User Terms and Conditions whether as a registered or unregistered user. By using the Website you are indicating you accept these terms of use and that you agree to abide by them. From time to time we may change these Terms and Conditions, and will post revisions on this website. We recommend that you read these Terms and Conditions prior to using our site and thereafter regularly review any changes, and you are responsible for doing so.

Privacy

Use of the data that you provide us, or which is collected by use on our website, is governed by our Privacy Policy. By using our site you consent to such processing.

Eligibility

This site is designed primarily for doctors (who may be located anywhere in the world) and some parts of the site are only open to doctors who have registered with their resident country's registering body only.

Open parts of the site can be viewed by anyone but are designed for reading by doctors. To post any content, you have to have registered with us for this Website. There are two types of registered users (i) Registered Users; and (ii) Verified Registered Users.

Registered Users are users who are registered with us but we have not obtained evidence that they are medically qualified and registered with their medical regulatory body ("Registered Users"). Such doctors may register to simply contribute to the discussion forum without setting up a full profile but cannot contribute to clinical discussion forums. To become a Registered User you must complete and submit the online doc2doc registration form.

A verified Registered User is a user who states they are a doctor and who has also supplied us with details of their registration with their medical regulatory body and any other information we request. They are the only users allowed access to the closed clinical parts of the Website. To become a Verified Registered User you must complete the online doc2doc registration form and provide us with your GMC number (if applicable) or supply us with proof of registration from another country's medical regulatory body. We may at any time seek additional verification information from you.

If you want to become a Verified Registered User and are a doctor who lives abroad and does not have a GMC number, please contact our community manager via: community.doc2doc@bmjgroup.com.

Whether you are requesting to become a Registered User or a Verified Registered User, in either case we reserve the right to ask for proof of your qualification as a medical doctor. Additionally if you have made a request to be a Verified Registered User and our verification process reveals that you are not fully registered with the GMC (or other country's registration body) the request to become a Verified Registered User will be denied. In the event that you are registered with the relevant doctors' registration body but this is subsequently revoked, you will have no right to continue using the Website as a Verified Registered User. Whilst we take steps to authenticate doctors we cannot guarantee that every Registered User or Verified Registered User on doc2doc is indeed qualified or a registered practicing doctor.

Accounts and passwords

If you have registered on the Website any user identification code or password must be kept confidential and used only by you (unless agreed in writing with the BMJ Group). We have the right to disable any user identification code or password without prior notice whether chosen by you or allocated by us at any time if in our option you have failed to comply with any of the provisions of these User Terms and Conditions.

Personal doc2doc pages

doc2doc personal pages are profiles used solely for communicating with other users. You may not set up a doc2doc page on behalf of another individual or entity.

Some of these pages are open and some are closed or partially closed. Please always check the privacy settings and on the Website to see who can access this and what kind of material is expected to be included. We may or may not moderate this post publication.

You are solely responsible at your sole cost and expense for creating backup copies and replacing any material you post or store on the Website (subject to the legal rights of third parties).

When you post any material on the Website, you authorise and allow us to make such copies thereof as we deem necessary in order to facilitate the posting and storage of that material on the Website. Please also note that we will only re-use any such material to the extent that this is consistent with our Privacy Policy.

You are however granted a non exclusive, non transferable, perpetual, royalty free, worldwide licence back for any use of the material of which you have assigned to the BMJ Group for any lawful purpose. Please note however this excludes any responses to the content you have posted and permission must be sought from us for use of that by you.

Permission for use of our intellectual property

Any request for permission of any of our content or images, should be made via the Contact Us details.

Complaints

If you discover any content on this website which you consider breaches any of these terms, or is otherwise unacceptable, you should notify the BMJ Group immediately by clicking on the "Report Abuse" icon or for non Registered Users or non Verified Registered Users the "Contact Us" icon. The system will provide your name and contact details and details of the relevant content (including a description of its location).

Should we received a complaint we will consider the complaint and will usually make our own judgements on the sorts of things mentioned in our "user conduct" section, rather than refer them to our lawyer and if in doubt this will be removed. In many cases, considering the in depth legal issues which may apply, we won't want to spend money to confirm and so may simply remove the content. The same applies to all alleged breaches or anything which we may discover (in the event that we choose to moderate post publication).

We reserve the right whether as subject to a complaint or whether we discover anything should we moderate post publication, in our absolute discretion to edit any responses so. If only before and after of publication or to remove whole or part of the contribution and state that we have done so. If only a line or two of an otherwise OK response is unlawful or in breach of our terms, we may delete the words or line and leave the rest. Again this is at our discretion.

We try to avoid entering into lengthy correspondence about why we have removed any postings and are not obliged to advise anyone alleged to have or whom we think has infringed the terms that we are or have altered, removed or edited any material they have posted. It's not a good use of our resources and any response we give it is at our absolute discretion.

You acknowledge, consent and agree that the BMJ Group may access, preserve, and disclose your account information and any content posted by you in order to: (a) comply with any legal process; (b) enforce these User Terms and Conditions ; (c) respond to claims that any content posted violates the rights of any third party; (d) respond to your requests for assistance; or (e) protect the rights, property, or personal safety of the BMJ Group, other users of this Website and the public. Further detail can be seen in our Privacy Policy.
